

Jenny Wong was elected as the Berkeley City Auditor in 2018 and re-elected in 2022. Prior to local government, she conducted numerous audits and served as a professional development advisor to new staff at the U.S. Government Accountability Office for 18 years. Jenny was also previously the Executive Director of the intergovernmental audit forums, coordinating trainings for federal, state and local government auditors. She has also worked on health and mental health issues in San Francisco and New York city governments. Her office has won four Knighton auditing awards under her leadership. Jenny also enjoys her time on the Conference Committee of the Association of Local Government Auditors Association. She is currently a member of ASPA's Center for Accountability and Performance. She holds a Bachelor's in Economics from UC Berkeley and a Master's in Public Administration from NYU.